

10 staffs of ANDMA trained to search and rescue in Turkey

As it is obvious that search and rescuing is a very important element during natural disasters and if we have a perfect and trained team we can save lives and mitigate the risk of disasters.

According to this Afghanistan National Disaster Management Authority ANDMA sent 10 staffs of different offices of ANDMA to participate in the training course, the team spent about 24 days studying various subjects including: rapid assessment of injuries and damages, first aids, how to rescue people when drowning, how to rescue people in low oxygen places, how to tie a rope for saving operations, how to rescue during comical wars and how to help injuries of radio active.

The Afghan team after finishing the course which were thought by experts and experienced teachers returned back on 1387/4/8 and are ready for conducting operations during natural disaster in the country level.
